ABOUT THIS UNIT

- Unit description
The unit aims to provide students who want to explore aspects of learning and teaching within their discipline, with the knowledge and skills to enable them to be effective teaching assistants at undergraduate level. This unit explores a number of instructional issues empowering individuals to develop specific teaching capabilities. These include: delivering and presenting a lesson, classroom management, providing student feedback, writing assessment items, questioning and answering in class, conducting online discussions and developing cross-cultural competencies in teaching and learning. Assessment will consist of participation in online activities, a negotiable task which might include producing a multimedia learning material or a piece of writing including a related presentation, class observation and delivering a short lesson. Over the course of the semester students will develop a broad range of educational graduate capabilities such as problem solving to adapt knowledge to the practice of learning and teaching, communication for cultural understanding in new environments and tasks as well as designing pedagogically productive instructional approaches in a creative and innovative way. ("Teaching assistant" is defined broadly to include any role, other than administration, that supports teaching and learning - including tutor, workshop or practical demonstration).

- Unit rationale
FBE204 provides students with knowledge and skills that will be important in their professional careers and that will enable them to be effective teaching assistants at undergraduate level. Through a series of weekly practical topics, students will develop their understanding of a range of issues that affect planning, teaching and assessment at undergraduate level, and learn a range of practical teaching strategies to address these issues. The unit aims to expand students’ conceptions of learning and teaching and places a strong emphasis on learning through participation. Throughout the course, students will develop their skills in participating in and facilitating face-to-face and online discussions.
